My husband and I have used microsoft along with Netscape Navigator and AOL since 1994. We are both over 60 and have time to use the computer at home. We can see no possible reason to sue Microsoft when we purchased our computer, we added Microsoft Windows 95 by our choice and since we live in far Northern Minnesota there was no internet service available except through Netscape Navigator from Radio Shack, since then a local phone company and cable company have started internet service. We use the "E" symbol from Microsoft to connect to the ebay site, the light house from Netscape for our family history site, and man from AOL to talk to family and friend and email. WHAT IS THE PROBLEM?
